Dear Quinn:

I appreciate your relentless efforts in getting suicide prevention recognized as a priority not only in our company but in the organizations we serve. As a growing corporation there is constant change and we do so reacting to the demand of our customers. However, suicide prevention is not something we can continue to put off.

In the work that we do here, the majority of the population we serve is middle aged men. This is the same demographic you are also reaching out to. Partnering further is something I am looking forward to in this New Year. We will get suicide prevention added to our new employee training policy and we will start promoting QPR training to the organizations we serve and train.

Sincerely,
